A Message from the Principal . . .

by Jim Perry

It is hard to believe that our first semester is drawing to a close. I would like to take this opportunity to commend our students on their outstanding effort this semester and our teaching staff on their dedication and tenacity in helping our students strive toward their highest potential.

As a staff we talk often, and fully understand, that it is the process of achieving that holds the most potential to teach students that they possess the intelligence and capacity to build skills and knowledge. We call this thinking Growth Mindset where we believe strong effort and hard work will grow our intelligence and our capacity to learn.

We hope that you will look for opportunities at home to praise the process more than the product and reinforce, with us, that effort and persistence are habits that will serve our students well their entire life. One of our teachers came across this quote during the week and forwarded it to the staff as a reminder for all of us as we put in a lot of extra time with students this week preparing for final exams:

"People are in greater need of your praise when they try and fail than when they try and succeed."

We need this reminder because our society can be very focused on the product, to the point where young people feel that their effort is worthless if their end product isn't "good enough", or "as good as". What do we do to a young person's capacity for achievement through persistence and strong effort, and even innovation when we do not emphasize the process over the product?

As a last note, we schedule our final exams on the two

College Presentation on Personal Statements and Scholarships

On Monday, December 14th, Karen Cuzydlo, an advisor from Lansing Community College made an hour long presentation to all KWHS Juniors and Seniors on how to write a successful personal statement which is used for both college applications and scholarship opportunities. As a member of LCC's scholarship selection panel, Ms. Cuzydlo was able to give our students inside information on what the committee is looking for with respect to personal statements. She emphasized the importance of technical aspects of writing such as spelling, grammar and organization. She also discussed content information which includes personal experience and history, goals and ambitions, and passion. Students participated in a brainstorming session to organize their thoughts for their own personal essays. Ms. Cuzydlo also provided our students with several tips for applying for scholarships. Some highlights from her presentation are listed below.

Tips for Applying for Scholarships

- Keep a portfolio of all athletic and academic achievements, community service projects,
- Leadership roles and any other awards or honors you have received.
- Have three written letters of reference available (on professional letterhead).

- Most scholarship applications require a written personal statement. This explains who you are, your future goals, and should set you apart from other applicants. Practice writing your personal statement now.
- Involvement in extracurricular activities and volunteer work is looked upon favorably when being considered for a scholarship.
- Search your institution's "scholarship" web site to explore all scholarships. For example, go to www.lcc.edu/scholarships and then look at all the options including "external scholarship opportunities".
